

LITIGATION LIMITATION

Psychotherapists at Donna Scott Therapy do not do court work (such as, but not limited to, testifying in divorce and custody disputes, injuries, lawsuits, etc....).

If you need these services, I will give you referrals to forensic psychologists who specialize in these cases.

My desire is to protect your psychotherapy from the intrusiveness of legal proceedings.

1. Confidentiality – Your therapist cannot release any information about you without your written permission (exceptions to this, such as child or elder abuse, danger to self or others, are explained in our consent to treatment form).
2. Confidentiality in Couple's Therapy – Your therapist cannot release records unless both clients give written permission.

To be in psychotherapy at the Donna Scott Therapy, you must agree that neither you, nor your attorney, nor anyone else acting on your behalf will call on your therapist to testify in court or at any other proceeding, nor will a disclosure of psychotherapy records be requested for legal proceedings.

This is in your best interest because:

1. If you place your mental status at issue in litigation initiated by you, the defendant (other side) has the right to obtain your psychotherapy records and/or testimony by your psychotherapist. Your adversary would have the right to know everything you've talked about in psychotherapy.
2. Forensic psychology (custody evaluations, workers comp, lawsuits, etc.) is not an area of expertise for the therapists of Donna Scott Therapy. If you are involved in legal proceedings, subpoenaing a therapist without forensic expertise to testify could hurt your case more than help. Forensic psychologists do assessments (not psychotherapy) and are trained as expert witnesses.
3. The goals of legal proceedings (winning a case) are not the same as the goals of psychotherapy (exploring emotions and improving relationships in a safe and protected place). Psychotherapists are not permitted to have dual roles with a client that interfere with the client's therapy (BPC4980.021845 (a) CA regulations). Any involvement in legal proceedings would necessitate termination of therapy.

I understand and agree to this litigation limitation.
